

The Democrat Party Cannot Run From Their Past

By CS Bennett

If you go to the history section of the DNC's website (Democrat National Committee), it says, and I quote;

'For more than 200 years, our party has led the fight for civil rights, health care, Social Security, workers' rights, and women's rights. We are the party of Barack Obama, John F. Kennedy, FDR, and the countless everyday Americans who work each day to build a more perfect union. Take a look at some of our accomplishments, and you'll see why we're proud to be Democrats.'

Aside from being the party of the presidents they remembered to mention, the rest is hogwash...pure outright lies and half truths.

The truth of the matter is this. The democrats were anything but interested in the plight of Blacks or civil rights for Blacks, and that of women. Their party hated the very notion of Blacks having their freedom back and the right to vote. They also loathed the thought of women having the right to vote. Furthermore, they vigorously fought every bill in favor of these rights the republicans brought up for a vote.

The sins of the Democrat Party against people of color and their racist policies are well documented, just hidden, and never talked about. Their despicable treatment of minorities is shameful. More importantly, and shameful, the republicans should have never allowed liberals to control the narrative. Every reputable republican leader and president should have reminded all of America about the deplorable history of the Democrat Party and their hostile views on race relations. But they did not. Perhaps they did not even know their own party's history.

The lesson from this article is this; the citizens of the United States should be continually reminded about the Democrat Party's diabolical past. Republican leaders should be hammering this truth to all four corners of the continent, if not the world. If they do, and we join in, people like Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders will never become president of this great country. Matter-of-fact, no liberal will. No doubt, we will all be better off because of this.
